

HUMAN FOOSBALL

Set-up

Put down parallel lines of tape going across the width of the room. These lines are like the bars on the foosball table linking your men together. These lines will be spaced about 6 feet apart.

Set your goal markers about 10 feet apart on the outer most lines.

Divide the people into two equal teams and have them stand on the tape lines as indicated in the diagram. There are six people per team. (If you have more or less people, then arrange them on the lines in rough proportion to how they are shown on the chart. In other words, a little less than half of one team will be on the center lines, about twice that number will be on the next lines, and so on.)

Rules

This game plays just like foosball but it is life-size. Like real foosball the players will have to stay in the same order on their designated line. But, unlike the table foosball, the spacing between the players will change as they move up a down their line.

Human Foosball Field

Players have to kick the ball (no hands) into the opposing team's goal. Goalies can use their hands.

Players can move back and forth on their own line but must keep at least one foot on the line at all times. There is no passing teammates on their line. The players should pass the ball instead.

Play

Have all of the players on Team A face Team B's goal. And likewise, have all of the players on Team B face Team A's goal.

The referee will roll the ball between the two center lines and play begins.
